Vacen Lee Taylor trails slightly behind the men and women of esteemed authorship, those extremely talented individuals in the field of writing. However, Vacen's early achievements place her well for a future in writing.

Those early milestones include being long listed in 2010 for the QWC/Allen & Unwin Manuscript Development Program for Children's Fiction Writers and the QWC/Hachette Manuscript Development Program for Fiction and Non-Fiction Writers, and having her first piece of flash fiction published by Death Head Grin, an American ezine, and later having her five part series After the Rain published consecutively, and finally, submitting Message of Death for consideration in the DHG American anthology.

Where the best journeys begin ...
Jupiter's sunset is waiting just for you!

Vacen has always drawn confidence from a willingness to learn and grow as she strives to find her voice in the art of writing. "It's important to have resilience," she says. "The state of having buoyancy in life. Being willing to continue when the task requires more strength or stamina to keep moving forward, to start again or perhaps to get back to the job at hand." She smiles and adds, "Don't ever stop believing in yourself."

We believe that while the odds are less than even, she's a runner in the race to write something the world will never forget. When she finally passes the post, is yet to be decided ...
